

Notes #1: How the Sun Causes Wind

~75% of Earth's surface is covered in water. The oceans and the continents heat unevenly. The land heats faster than the water. The air over the land gets warm and rises because the molecules are further apart (less dense). Cooler air over the oceans moves in to replace the rising hot air. Moving air is called wind.

